

Domaine Bailly-Reverdy

The Domaine Bailly-Reverdy is an emblematic family-owned wine estate of the Sancerre region, located in Bué, at the heart of the prestigious Sancerre appellation in the Loire Valley. Founded in the 1950s by Bernard Bailly and Marie-Thérèse Reverdy, the estate is now run with passion by Franck Bailly and his nephew Aurélien, who continue a tradition rooted in excellence, terroir expression, and quality. The estate covers nearly 28 hectares of vineyards spread across the diverse soils of flint, limestone pebbles ("caillottes"), and Kimmeridgian marl ("terres blanches") that define the Sancerrois, giving the wines their finesse, minerality, and aromatic precision.

Production includes Sancerre white, red, and rosé wines, as well as highly regarded single-vineyard cuvées such as Sancerre Blanc "Les Monts Damnés", sourced from a legendary, steep hillside, and "Chêne Marchand", a white wine known for its purity, precision, and depth.

The estate practices sustainable viticulture, emphasizing soil management and limiting the use of chemical treatments in order to respect and enhance the natural expression of the terroir.

Wines from Domaine Bailly-Reverdy are widely recognized for their elegance, distinctive minerality, and excellent food-pairing versatility, from seafood to grilled meats.
